Information about Volunteering at Seacrest

Those interested in volunteering will need to attend an orientation that is held once a month. More details about orientation dates and times will be sent after your application is processed.

Volunteer duties will vary based on Seacrest's needs, but may include and are not limited to grounds work, fencing projects, general chores, assisting with tours, and animal care tasks. As a volunteer, you will work around the Seacrest animals but might not directly work with them. Working and interacting directly with our wolves and small animals will be dependent on a number of variables, including management approval and number of days worked.

Once you successfully complete orientation and your initial required shifts, you will be eligible for privileges such as interacting with our wolves (and getting a few photos with them), involvement in meetings, and learning a variety of animal husbandry skills. Anyone who completes at least 2 Saturday volunteer shifts per month, for 4 consecutive months is eligible to be trained as a Saturday Tour Guide to lead our educational programs on Saturdays.
